Introduction

In 2005-06, the Stockholm Network underwent another period of rapid expansion of its staff, activities and influence. According to a survey of 60% of our member think tanks, this year, we and our colleagues have published more than 8,000 high quality press articles, delivered more than 600 major publications and hosted more than 600 major events. As such, the Stockholm Network and its members' work are now influencing many millions of Europeans.

Full details of all our achievements are provided in the following pages, including information about our events, publications and reports, newsletters, outreach activities and work programmes. As we have expanded, we have also streamlined our work into three clearly defined areas of activity – Health and Welfare, Energy and Environment and Intellectual Property and Competition. Each programme now has a dedicated manager within the Stockholm Network team and each benefits greatly from the expertise of policy thinkers, including in-house experts Meir Pugatch on IP and Peter Nolan on energy and environmental affairs.

Looking to the future, we wish to build on the foundations of this success to ensure that our growth continues to be accompanied by the quality, attention to detail and dynamic approach that now defines the Stockholm Network as Europe's leading pan-European think tank and market-oriented network.

Think tanks in Europe today operate in a more challenging environment than ever before. There are not only many more such organisations, but also a consequently greater focus on the quality, independence and reputation of think tanks and policy institutes as a whole.

As a result, in the year ahead we will be leading the way in addressing issues of transparency and reputation in order to make sure that the good work think tanks do continues to be held in the highest regard. Alongside our usual policy research, we will be finding out how we are viewed by those outside the think tank community and leading a drive to put in place procedures to institutionalise greater transparency and independence for think tanks across the political spectrum.

To lead this drive, we have for the first time included a list of sponsors in our annual report, which will be placed online on our newly re-launched website. We are grateful to all our funders for their support and for agreeing to join with us in making think tanks more open about their affairs. We believe this will benefit us all and serve as an important reminder of our need for independent thinking and research, which are so vital if we wish to solve the economic and social problems Europe faces today.

Events and Publications

Stockholm Network publications in 2005 and early 2006 spanned a range of topics including European healthcare reform, taxation policy, reform in Eastern Europe, intellectual property and public perceptions of environmental issues. We also hosted 12 Amigo Society meetings and 11 Westminster Fringe debates during the period, vastly increasing our network in these cities and beyond.

Cholesterol: The Public Policy Implications of Not Doing Enough

by Stephen Pollard, Mike Sedgley and Tony Hockley (published 2006)

This paper considers the implications for public policy within Europe of a continued lack of attention to the impact of high and rising levels of cholesterol between now and 2020. Rather than dealing with the purely medical impact, it concentrates on an area of universal public policy concern, namely the impact on Europe's welfare systems and the knock-on effect on national budgets and economic growth.

Flat Tax: Towards a British Model

by Allister Heath (published 2006)

Allister Heath explores the possibility of a British flat tax, discovering it to be both a viable, and desirable, model for the UK. This paper is published in conjunction with the Taxpayers' Alliance, UK.

Intellectual Property Frontiers: Expanding the Borders of Discussion

by Dr. Meir Pugatch and Anne K. Jensen (eds.) (published 2006)

The first book to be published by the Stockholm Network Intellectual Property and Competition programme, Expanding the Borders draws on the expertise of eighteen distinguished scholars, policymakers and practitioners. It aims to familiarise readers with the diversity of themes and debates currently taking place in the field of IP.

The publication is divided into four sections:

- The Role of Intellectual Property in the Business Arena
- Intellectual Property Dilemmas
- Global Issues
- The European Perspective

European Dawn: After the Social Model

by Johnny Munkhammar (published 2005, in association with Timbro)

An intense debate is raging in Western Europe. Growth is slowing, employment is falling, the number of people living off the state is increasing, and welfare services are deteriorating. Why? Who is responsible? What should be done?

Taxes are being lowered, public commitments limited, private initiatives admitted, and deregulation measures introduced. But reforms in Western Europe are far too modest, and the politicians in charge are keeping quiet about the aims – in fact, they often argue the opposite. Citizens are being kept in the dark about the purpose of the changes. It is time to speak clearly about the causes of the problems, the way out and the European dawn that awaits us after the implementation of thorough reform. This book is intended to inspire reform, to provide a clear analysis, and to stimulate an open debate.

Putting the Environment in Perspective

by Helen Disney, Dan Lewis (published 2005)

A groundbreaking survey of UK public attitudes toward the environment which found that 94% of people say that protecting the environment is important for the UK. However, the public strongly feels that Government action in tackling threats to the environment is ineffective. Just 8% rate the effectiveness of national governments on this issue and only 11% think that international treaties on the environment, such as Kyoto, are effective.

Does the West Know Best?

by Terence O'Dwyer (ed.) (published 2005)

Accession of the Central and Eastern European states has provided the impetus for a fundamental re-evaluation of Europe's economic and social model. New member states were forced to introduce radical reforms to tackle the deep-seated problems of the welfare state and in so doing have challenged the orthodoxy of Western European systems. With the west now facing the impending crises of an aging population, unsustainable healthcare systems, and the prospect of sustained weak economic growth, the question remains: Should 'old Europe' mimic the reforms of its newest partners? Indeed, does 'old Europe' have a choice but to reform?

Does the West Know Best? assembles leading thinkers from both eastern and western Europe to examine whether the EU-15 can learn from some of the new member states' more radical approaches to social and economic reform. It questions the sustainability of the European economic and social model, while seeking solutions to its endemic problems

Poles Apart?

by Helen Disney, David Hill, Pavel Hrobon, Adam Kruszewski, Henrieta Madarova, Rick Nye, Martin Stefunko (published 2005)

It is often assumed that there is a wide gap between eastern and western Europe, not just geographically, but also when it comes to the state of their healthcare systems.

Slovakia, Poland and Hungary all emerged from the yoke of communism with state-run, state-funded systems that were highly bureaucratic, mismanaged and often corrupt. Many citizens could only get access to healthcare by bribing physicians – and some still do today. The systems were also largely underfunded, especially in comparison with other EU nations. But how have these countries fared since the fall of the Berlin Wall, and what do their attitudes tell us about the prospects for reform today?

Poles Apart? sets out to examine whether this perception is really true by asking the opinions of 3,000 central and eastern Europeans and comparing them with their counterparts in the rest of the EU

Eye On Europe

The Stockholm Network's quarterly newsletter, launched in Autumn 2004, consolidates and publicises our range of activities to a wider audience, highlights new think tanks joining the network and gives our members a forward look into what Europe's leading think tanks have planned in the months ahead. It now has a circulation of over 2000 people.

Amigo Society

Founded in 2004, the mission of the Amigo society is to bring together public policy experts, media representatives and members of civil society around policy issues of importance to tomorrow's enlarged Europe, with special focus on social policy in Belgium (health care, retirement, social security and labour market reform). The Society convenes monthly at the Amigo Hotel in Brussels.

Westminster Fringe

The Stockholm Network's monthly Westminster Fringe debates, held in London in partnership with The Economist, are a unique, cross-party forum bringing together politicians, the media, academics, think tanks, business and the wider public to debate the leading policy issues of the moment. The debates, which regularly attract over 200 guests, have previously focused on a range of issues including the flat tax, public services reform, free vs. fair trade and United Nations reform.

ANNE KRISTINE JENSEN is the Manager of Stockholm Network's I.P. and Competition Programme. She joined the Network in October 2004 following a period as an intern.

She is responsible for organising events and frequently contributes to and edits Stockholm Network publications.

Anne recently completed her studies at the London School of Economics, where she obtained a Masters Degree in Political Economy with a focus on International Trade. Previously, she had studied for her undergraduate degree at the Universities of Oslo (Norway) and Gothenburg (Sweden). Anne has also worked in the political department of the Norwegian embassy in Berlin and for the Norwegian Liberal-Conservative party.

SACHA KUMARIA is the Assistant Director of the Stockholm Network, and manager of its Energy and Environment Programme.

He works on external communications, fundraising and sponsor relations, and coordinates contact with the think tank members. He also jointly sets research priorities for the Environment and Energy Programme.

Sacha joined the Stockholm Network following a successful research internship at Civitas, a civil society think-tank and Stockholm Network member in London. He previously worked part-time as a student caller during his postgraduate studies, raising money for the University of Warwick Alumni Fund. After growing up in Hong Kong, Sacha returned to the UK to continue his studies, and holds a Degree in English and American Literature and a Masters in Ancient History from the University of Warwick.

SIMON MOORE joined the Stockholm Network in early 2006 following the completion of a successful internship period. In addition to administrative work and website maintenance, Simon is currently working on Beyond the Borders, a companion piece to The Stockholm Network's State of the Union publication, focusing this time on market-oriented reform in non-EU member states in Europe.

Simon holds a bachelors degree in politics from Lancaster University, where he was awarded the Frank Cass/Oakeshott prize for best overall performance in political theory and comparative politics.

PETER NOLAN is the Director of the Environment and Energy Programme. He is a graduate of Trinity College Dublin, City University in London and Birkbeck College, University of London with degrees in economics, mathematical finance and political science. While studying, he worked as a researcher for what was then the main Irish opposition party.

Peter is also a director of the Freedom Institute, an Irish free-market think-tank and writes regularly for the press in Ireland, the UK, Europe and the Middle East. Previously an investment banker specialising in emerging markets, he is director of development for an international financial information and analytics company.

TERENCE O'DWYER is manager of the Stockholm Network's Health and Welfare Programme. He is also responsible for coordinating the Amigo Society meetings, liaising with our Spanish and Portuguese think tank members and managing the Stockholm Network website. Terry joined the Stockholm Network in July 2004. He started his career as an intern, but was brought on board as a permanent member of staff in October 2004.

After growing up in Brazil, Mexico and the USA, Terry returned to the UK to study History at the University of Durham. He then moved on to Oxford University, and holds a Masters in Latin American Studies.

KATIE PERRIOR is the Media Director of the Stockholm Network. She joined us in July 2005 to help promote our work in the British, European and International media.

She is the co-founder and director of The Research Shop, an independent media agency which specialises in out-sourced, ad-hoc media research.

Katie acted as a media consultant to the award winning television programme, 'Who Wants To Be A Millionaire?', and has worked for several politicians, notably the Conservative Party Chairman and the Shadow Home Secretary during high profile campaigns. Most recently, she has also worked for ITV and Channel 4 News, and is a local councillor, and Conservative Spokesman for Community Safety, for the London borough of Bexley.

DR MEIR PUGATCH heads the I.P. and Competition programme at the Stockholm Network and edits its monthly e-newsletter, Know IP. He is based at the School of Public Health, University of Haifa in Israel, where he is a lecturer on intellectual property policy, management and the exploitation of knowledge assets and entrepreneurship.

Dr Pugatch is also a guest lecturer at the Department of International Relations, Hebrew University Jerusalem, where he lectures on the international political economy of trade policy.

Constructing a Network

2005-06 was a period of consolidation for the Stockholm Network. After the rapid growth of previous years, the SN undertook a period of relationship-building with its 121 partner groups, who now span 40 nations.

Members Poll 2005

PUBLICATIONS IN 2005

Stockholm Network Members published over 600 books, reports, monographs, and other assorted publications.

88% of surveyed Member think tanks released at least one publication in 2005, with 62% having published at least five pieces of work, and 35% having published ten or more.

Nearly three quarters (74%) say their publications are available online.

The Stockholm Network, in conjunction with Populus, the pollsters for The Times of London and a regular collaborator in Stockholm Network publications, carried out a poll among our members to ascertain an accurate picture of the size of the market-oriented movement in Europe, and the impact that we are all having on the political debate in Europe.

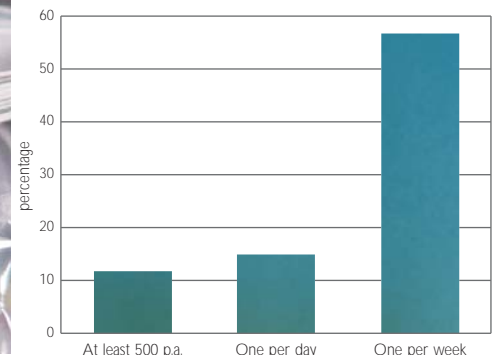

MEDIA / WEB HITS (PER YEAR)

- Stockholm Network Members had over 8,000 media hits in 2005.

- Stockholm Network Members had a total of 22.5m web site visitors in 2005.

12% of respondents received at least 500 media hits per annum, while 15% achieved the equivalent of one media hit per day, and over 56% received at least one media hit per week.

Nearly half of respondents (47%) received over 100,000 web site visitors, with 13% receiving over 1m.

Web Statistics

February 2006 saw the Stockholm Network launch its new website. As these figures prove, the site has flourished, allowing the Network to provide a larger audience with greater knowledge about our members, and about market-oriented reform across Europe.
